Tuesday, November 18-6 P. M.

The market to-day appears to be very unsettled, and rices very feverish. Some of the fancies are up, and some are down. State stocks have improved. Illinois 6's went up 2 per ct.; Farmers' Loan, \(\frac{1}{2}; \) Nor'h & Worc'r, \(\frac{1}{2}; \) Merris Canal fell off | per cent; Long Island, 1; Vicksburg, | ; while Penn. 5's, Ohio 6's, Canton, Harlem, Reading, and North American Trust, closed firm at yesterday's prices.

The Harlem Railroad Company have advertised for, contracts to furnish materials for the superstructure of the road, on the extension from White Plains, through Westchester County, to Somers. The grading of this extension, being in length about twenty-five miles, is under contract, and will be ready for the superstructure by the 1st of May next, and the cars will probably pass from New York to Somers early in June. The termina-tion will then be in the heart of an exceedingly rich agricultural section of the country, and at one of the largest towns of the interior. This Company is rapidly extending the road towards Albany, the principal object being to connect this city with that by railroad, as soon as possible, leaving out of view, at present, any connection with the contemplated Eastern roads, as that will be made in due time. The Harlem railroad runs about midtion at Somers will be about twenty-five miles from the waters of each. This location gives the road the control of the interior travel and freight at all seasons. The business of the Company, so far, has been of an entirely local character, and confined to only twenty-five miles of road. On the fourteenth of May last, the legislature of this State made an amendment to the charter of the New York and Harlem Railroad Company, by which authority was given to extend the road from the north line of estchester county to Albany. One of the conditions of that charter is, that the Company shall expend $500,000 in extending the Iroad, before the 1st of May, 1946, or within one year from the passage of the amendment. This extension has been put under contract, and from the estimates made, the total cost of construction will county, the Company will issue bonds to the amount of $500,000, payable five years after date, bearing interest t the rate of six and a half per cent per annum, with the privilege of converting the same into stock, at par, at any time before reaching maturity. These bonds are to be secured by a mortgage upon the road, from Fordham to the north line of Westchester county, a distance of about

The condition of the Harlem Railroad Company, according to the most recent report, was of the most favor, able character, and the receipts from the road (as it now terminates) have been large enough to permit the decla-ration of a small dividend upon the capital stock, but the surplus has been reserved to pay the interest on the loan made to construct the extension. The total debt of the Company, up to the 1st of September, amounted to $612,856 S1. The par value of stock issued, amounts to $1,150,000, making the total liabilities of the Company, or capital and debt, $1,762,856 81. The real and perso property of the Company (exclusive of the road) is valued at $270,271, and the cost of the road, to its present termi gate cost of the property held by the Company, $1,429,584 66.

RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES OF THE HARLEM RAIL

The whole amount of receipts for freight and passengers, from January 1st, 1843, to January 1st, 1844, the road was opened to White Plains, and the whole receipts for passengers and freight, from January 1st, 1844, to January 1st, 1845, amounted to.

From the 1st day of January, 1845, to the first day of September inst, the receipts have already amounted to.

The receipts for the same period in 1844 was.

There are yet four good running months in this year for passengers, and the largest me, and is in the year for freight, and at the same ratic of increase, the receipts for the whole year, at the lowest estimate, must reach.

who'e year, at the lowest estimate, must reach... 180,000 the current expenses for running the road, for the year, from January 1st, 1844, to January 1st, 1845, including repairs upon road and the horse account—that is, charging the accountwith all the horses purchased, and crediting it with the horses such—were 78,286 11 Extraordinary expenses, such as cash paid for injuries and accidents, introducing Croton water, &c., and being such a class of expenses as may or may not occur in each year............. 1,804 86—80,090 to 1,804 86—80,090 to pay the interest on its debt, on a new loan raised for an extension greater than its present length, and its run-ning expenses, leaving a balance of about twenty thousand dollars, towards paying a idividend on its capital stock. It is estimated that the extension to Somertown will increase the receipts the first year nearly one hundred thousand dollars, making the gross income the first year after the extension to Putnam county, about three hundred thousand dollars—an amount sufficient to pay the interest on the debt of $1,112,857, the running expenses, and a dividend on the capital stock.

This must be the only road between this city and Albany on the east side of the Hudson river. The idea of bany on the east side of the Hudson river. The idea of a road constructed on the margin of the river, on either side, is perfectly preposterous. In the first place, it would be impossible to fill up the stock, and even could the stock be taken, it would never pay the first fraction of a dividend, as no railroad could successfully compete with the magnificent boats that run between this city and Albany, at the rate of at least twenty five miles an hour, carrying passengers at twenty-five cents a head, being carrying passengers at twenty-five cents a head, being about one sixth of a cent a mile. Boats like the Oregon and Hendrick Hudson can make money at the above price of passage, which completely shuts out all opposition for railroads. A railroad running from this city to Albany, must take an interior route on either side of the river, to secure the waytravel, which at all seasons is very arge. A railroad could only command the river trave during the close of navigation, which averages only about three months in the year, and from the trade, &c for that short period, a road thus located would be compelled to derive its income. The location of the Harlem railroad is very favorable for a large business at all times, from its immediate vicinity, while a communication with the great eastern lines, would make it one of the most profitable roads in the country.

There is a vast deal of prejudice in the public mind in relation to this road, but it is rapidly giving way to confidence. The mismanagement of past years has given the road a bad character, and we must admit deservedly so; out it is now in the hands of a Board of Directors equal, if not superior, to any other in the coun-

"American railroad king," is president, and his best energies are devoted to its success. The capitalists of New England have been loudly complimented upon the enterprise thay have exhibited, in the construction of the net work of railroads that covers that section of country; but there are no ten men in Massachusetts or any other Eastern State, who collectively own as largely of railroad stocks as the gentleman above named. Most of the large railroad stock owners at the East, are also large real estate owners, and have looked as much to the improvement of their landed property, as to good dividends from their stock investments; but not so with our great railroad king; he has no lots of land to improve in value by the construction of a certain railway, but looks solely to the investment for returns, and is at all times actively engaged in advancing permanently the value of chares. Had it not been for his liberality, enterprise, or whatever other name it may be called, the grisRailroad would have lingered along for, per-haps, months or years; the capital stock of the Wor-cester and Providence, of the Worcester and Nashus, of the Saratoga and Washington and other Railroad Companies, would, perhaps, never have been filled but for the aid from this source, and the stock of the Harlem Railroad would not have been near its present value had the Company been under a less able direction. New York capital has constructed more rail-vestments with our capitalists than formerly, and we expect to see every railroad diverging from this city, paypect to see every railroad diverging from this city, ing good dividends, before the lapse of many years.

HILL'S INFALIBLE ONGUENT FOR THE HAIR.

CAN any thing be more honest? Notice the fact that I never publish any certificate commendatory of the above unless it has the residence of the individual giving it appended, which enables you to astisfy yourselves (by enquiry) that the Onguent is really what it purports to be; and understand ye also that it is warranted in all cases, either young or old, if properly applied, to effectually stay aloneey or falling off of the hair, restore it to bald parts, eradicate pityrisais, dandruff, acurf, and all exfoliations of the cuticle or scalp; change red, or grey hairs to a beautiful dark color, make the hair moist, soft, curly, &c.

I do hereby certify that I have been seriously afflicted with dandruff and falling off of the hair, and made use of several articles for the same without; the least benefit; indeed I was fearful of becoming bald; finally, being induced to use Hill's linfallible Onguent, I am happy to say the result was imost astisfactory, for in a short time the dandruff entirely disappeared, my hair soon commenced growing, and is now thicker than it ever was, being also soft, moist and glossy. I can strongly recommend it for the above.

nce of the New York Herald.

Washington, Monday Night, Nov. 17, 1845. Foreign Relations - Mr Buchanes and his Diplomatic Negotiations and Correspondence-Intense Interest which clusters around the Opening of Congress.

The excitement about who will be the printer to Congress, is pretty nearly decided, and the attention of the whole nation is now directing itself towards other points of deeper, and loftier interest .-It begins now to be a matter of paramount, intense interest, what will the message and the diplomatic correspondence of the first nine months of the new administration show to the country? What has Mr. Polk, and what has his Secretary done during the summer, to bring on, or to stave off war ! What anxiety has been manifested in this quarter, to bring to an honorable and amicable adjustment this mighty question? Every man of sense, among all parties, knows that these are the great questions that will come thundering up to the doors of the Capitol, when Senators have taken their seats. An honest, a free, a bold, an enlightened people will wait earnestly for the response. When the response is given, Mr. Buchanan will have the loftiest spot to stand on a diplomatist can ask for, to show himself to his countrymen. All eyes will be turned on him, from the East and the West, the North and the South. It will no doubt be for him an anxious crisis. If, when his despatches are read, they prove to have been written with that coolness and sagacity—that boldness, frankness and independence—it they are pervaded by that just, honorable, conciliating and magnanimous sprit which bespeak the great statesman and the lofty minded patriot, they will place him where he has never before stood.

Currosity, I find, has already among members of all parties who have come, reached a point of intensity—everybody is anxious to know what the President and his Secretary have done. This question is rapidly swallowing up all others, and before Congress meets, it will prove to be the rod of Aaron which swallowed up the wands of the Egyptian enchanters. A few men will continue to talk about the printing, and some will talk angrily. The whigs will foment the matter, for they begun it, and have done their best to convince the country that the feud was general, and never could be healed, and to aid their cause they will "let slip the dogs of war," and resort to all those tricks used to operate upon old women and young children. The letter writers have wrote about this, for they have had nothing else to write about, and they have magnified it beyond truth or possibility. But the fire has gone down, if indeed there ever was anything but smoke; the mists are clearing away, and the nation, which will not be humbugged long on any point, is turning its eye to a greater question, to which we return again. What will the diplomatic correspondence reveal? I have, like all the world, tried to find out what I could, and I suppose I know as much as my eighbors. The message will contain a calm, (it will be a cool document—not a heated one,) quit presentation of the greatest question of this generation—what are our claims to Oregon and what course we must pursue. The history of former negotiations on that quiet, that repose, that self-poseesion that exhausts courtesy and wit and argument, before it comes to the point of the blade. He is a cavalier in diplomacy, even to the hair of his head—Buchanan is an admirable mixture of the cavalier and the Roundhead, and in a long deep game would do what the Carolinian never could accomplish. England hates Calhoun. She would have approached the Oregon question very reluctantly if he had been Mr. Polk's Secretary. His despatch to Mr. King was a bold, a magnificent stroke; but the man who wrote it ought to be more proud of it as a speech of an indignant Senator, for which nobody but himself was responsible, than as a despatch—at least a despatch that was to be made public.

Mr. Buchanan, not unlikely believed every word of it—probably entered deeply into its spirit—but he is not a man that would ever have written it. He would have never sent such a despatch, that went whizzing so like a shell, and struck so like a bomb upon Europe. Nothing of this kind will be seen in Buchanan's budget. But if that budget does not astonish the people of this country, and satisfy all parties that in choosing the Pennsylvania iron monger for his counsellor, Young Hickory did well, I will pass for a talse prophet and the son of one. But at all events, we shall see. At any rate, fortune has given the Secretary a saperb chance of showing himself to the nation—to the world. He knows that the country is waiting to see what he has done, and that England and all Europe, besides a poor ragged, bob-tailed, anarchy haunted republic the world has agreed to call Mexico, are looking at him, and will wait for his despatches, and see the effect they have upon the country. Thus far, during the short life of the administration, he has been in the shade—not of other men—but of time. The time has not yet come that he could show himself—he has had no chance. And during the summer the letter writers have been amusing the country by their stories, and newe, and rumors of all colors and kinds—what he has said a law, and in all the private relations of the pure enough for any station.

Monaicur le Captaine, the old Key Stone is a great State—you need not squirm, Sir, because you are a New Yorker—New York has had one President; would it be anything more than fair that Pennsylvania should have her chance? Wait for the despatches before you answer, and see if she is worthy of it.

There goes my candle-good night.
